Project description

The unease of young people in the institutions, local, national and international, has reached alarming levels and policy is increasingly inattentive to their requests and few inclusive/permeable to their participation. The project connects the two worlds, calling the first to compete in a process of active citizenship and the latter to accept a close encounter with the new stakeholders.

A program (duration: 15 months):

whose specific objective is represented by the local promotion of the leadership of 300 young people aged 15 to 22 years with the involvement of 30 secondary schools/Country, whose expected result of the intervention consists of a dialogue – between young people and the elected representatives in the Regional Councils – continuous during an entire legislature and publicize through a EU dedicated website, whose expected activities are: 1. the creation of 30 editing/Country (10 for each editing), in constant dialogue with each other and with the 30 regional councilors “adopted” (1 councilor for each editing); 2. the organization of 4 training workshops/Country, focused on the 300 editors and attended by the 30 regional councilors, in order to identify and formulate a participatory multilingual “spelling-book of direct democracy”; 3. the organization of 30 meetings, one for each school, with the adopted councilor; 4. the preparation of a dedicated website and its continuous update – guaranteed by the contributions deriving from the 30 newsrooms – on the parliamentary activity of each elected, in particular on policies inspired from the same and interesting young people; 5. the organization of a “Youth Regional Conference”/Country, in connection with the European Week; 6. the organization of a final workshop to present the results and discuss new proposals in order to ensure to the intervention a real future sustainability.
